When you turn 18, your parents no longer have the right or the ability to talk to your doctors, your insurance company, your bank, or, if this applies, your bursar office at college.

While independence is a beautiful thing, if there is an emergency or if you need the help, what then? Come spend an hour learning about what you should do to protect your young adult needs in case of an emergency. The information will be appropriate for college students, in and out of state, who are from Maryland, as well as young adults joining the work force.

There will be a notary on hand in case you want to fill out the appropriate forms then and there.

We will discuss HIPPA waivers, FERPA forms, health care power of attorneys (agents and living wills), and financial power of attorney documents.

This event is FREE.
